NOT FOR CITATION

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT

FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

SAN JOSE DIVISION

CHUCK BROWNING, individually and on behalf of all persons similarly situated,

Case No. C04-01463 HRL

Plaintiff,

v.

YAHOO! INC.; CONSUMERINFO.COM,
INC.; and EXPERIAN NORTH AMERICA,
INC.;

ORDER GRANTING JOINT MOTION FOR FINAL APPROVAL OF AMENDED
SETTLEMENT AND DISMISSING ACTION WITH PREJUDICE

Defendants.

Re: Docket Nos. 132-2, 176, 178

I. INTRODUCTION

Chuck Browning saw on Yahoo!'s website the offering for a service called Yahoo! Credit Manager. The offering allegedly represented that, by subscribing to it, he would be able to "improve" his credit score, to actually "learn how to boost it in seconds." Browning subscribed (for $79.95 per year). The Credit Manager service was provided by Yahoo!'s purported "co-branded partner," ConsumerInfo.com, Inc. ("CIC"). CIC is owned by Experian, one of the country's major credit reporting organizations.

The Credit Repair Organization Act ("CROA"), 15 U.S.C. §1679, is intended to protect the public from unfair or deceptive advertising and business practices by credit repair organizations. Specifically, CROA focuses on providing consumers of credit repair organization

1 services with information necessary to make informed decisions concerning the purchase of such 2 services. To that end, a company in the "credit repair" business must adhere to a host of specified 3 regulations: e.g., (1) a written contract with the consumer specifying the payment terms, and (2) full 4 disclosure of the consumer's statutory rights - including cancellation options.

5 No one disputes that neither Yahoo!, CIC, nor Experian complied with the requirements of 6 CROA. The real questions in the litigation that followed were: (1) whether or not Defendants were 7 credit repair organizations subject to CROA; (2) whether the claims Browning ultimately brought 8 were appropriate for class action treatment; and, finally, (3) what was the effect here of an earlier 9 Alabama federal court's denial of class certification against CIC for CROA violations?

10 As this court intends to approve the settlement discussed at length below, it does not 11 formally reach the first or third question. As to the second, it answers in the affirmative with 12 respect to a settlement class.

14 II. PRESENT PROCEDURAL POSTURE

15 In February 2006, the parties jointly moved for certification of the tentative settlement 16 class and preliminary approval of the proposed settlement. After the Preliminary Approval hearing 17 and several interim orders, the parties eventually proffered an Amended Settlement Agreement.
18 The Amended Settlement entirely resolves the claims brought by Browning, on behalf of himself 19 and the settlement class, against CIC, Experian and Yahoo!. Defendants agree to certification of 20 the settlement class and to offer certain relief but deny that they fall within the Credit Repair 21 Organization Act's definition of a "credit repair organization," deny all claims alleged, and deny 22 that the case could be certified as a class action for trial purposes.

23 On December 27, 2006, this Court certified the tentative settlement class, preliminarily 24 approved the parties' Amended Settlement Agreement, approved and directed a plan for giving 25 notice to class members, appointed Class Counsel, and appointed the Settlement Administrator.
26 ("Prelim. Approval Order"). The Court also set deadlines for objecting to the settlement and for 27 requesting exclusion from the settlement class.

28

1 On July 31, 2007, the Court held a Final Fairness Hearing at which the moving parties and 2 certain objectors appeared and were heard. The order that follows addresses Plaintiff's motion for 3 an award of attorney's fees and expenses, the objections made by class members to the Amended 4 Settlement, and the joint motion for Final Approval of the Amended Settlement.

6 III. BACKGROUND

7 A. The Helms Litigation

8 The direct antecedent to this case is a proposed class action filed in Alabama federal court 9 captioned, Helms v. ConsumerInfo.com, Inc., No. CV-03-HS-1439-M (N.D. Ala., filed June 17, 10 2003). The Helms suit alleged (1) violations of CROA; (2) unjust enrichment and money had and 11 received; (3) constructive trust; and (4) conspiracy (Complaint ¶¶ 22-42). As with Browning, the 12 claims against CIC arose out of statements made on its website which allegedly subjected CIC to 13 CROA regulations.

14 The Helms case was litigated for more than two years, with both parties conducting 15 depositions, answering interrogatories, and responding to document requests. In 2004, the Helms 16 parties filed cross motions for summary judgment, and Plaintiff moved for class certification. The 17 Helms court granted in part and denied in part both motions for summary judgment. Helms v.
18 ConsumerInfo.com, Inc., 436 F. Supp. 2d 1220, 1238-39 (N.D. Ala. 2005). That court held that 19 "the representations of defendant imply that its services will help customers improve their credit 20 ratings," id. at 1232, and that CIC was therefore within the statutory definition of a "credit repair 21 organization." Id. at 1229-34. However, because this determination was an issue of first 22 impression, the Helms court sua sponte certified its summary judgment order for interlocutory 23 appeal to the Eleventh Circuit. Id. at 1224.

24 The Helms court subsequently denied class certification. Helms v. ConsumerInfo.com, Inc., 25 236 F.R.D. 561, 567-70 (N.D. Ala. 2005). Then, the Eleventh Circuit granted CIC's request for 26 interlocutory appeal on the summary judgment. After completion of appellate briefing, the parties 27 reached a tentative agreement on the settlement that is the subject of the instant motion, and the 28 Eleventh Circuit proceedings were stayed.

1 B. The Browning Litigation

2 In the meantime, in April 2004, Chuck Browning had filed this putative nationwide class 3 action against Yahoo! Inc. alleging the same claims, noted above, that were pled in Helms.¹ Then, 4 after the denial of class certification in Helms, Browning sought leave to file a Second Amended 5 Complaint to add CIC and the Experian Entities² ("Experian") as defendants in his case. He alleged 6 that Yahoo! and the prospective new defendants were intertwined business entities: Experian is 7 CIC's parent corporation; CIC provided the Credit Manager product to Yahoo!; and the three parties 8 maintained a "prominent co-branded partnership" in providing the products or services which 9 allegedly violated CROA. Although this Court granted the motion to amend, in doing so it wrote 10 that it was "skeptical about whether plaintiff will be able to satisfy it that he can maintain a class 11 action here against CIC — particularly where he admittedly seeks to revisit the earlier denial of 12 class certification against CIC in Alabama."

14 IV. DISCUSSION

15 A. Jurisdiction

16 This Court has jurisdiction over the claims the members of the class asserted in this 17 proceeding, personal jurisdiction over the settling parties (including all class members), and subject 18 matter jurisdiction to approve the Amended Settlement.

19 B. Class Definition and Scope of Release³

20 1. Class Definition

21 The parties agreed to the certification of a settlement class generally defined as people in 22 the United States who, between June 17, 1998 and December 27, 2006, entered into an agreement 23 over the Internet with the Defendants to purchase one of certain enumerated credit-monitoring or

24 ¹ Browning is represented in this case by plaintiff's counsel in Helms: Lowe & 25 Grammas LLP (formerly Lowe, Grammas, Hitson & Dana LLP).

26 ² The term "Experian Entities" shall mean Experian North America, Inc. and any 27 company that is a subsidiary, parent, corporate affiliate or division of Experian North America, Inc., and shall also include Credit Expert, LLC.

28 ³ For full text of the class definition and release, see the Amended Settlement Agreement (Docket No. 132-2) or Part VIII, Nos. 4-5 of this order.

United States District Court

For the Northern District of California

1 credit score products. This definition is subject to exclusions based on people with a relationship to 2 the Defendants or this case, and people who validly excluded themselves as set forth below.

3 Timely Exclusions: The Settlement Administrator received 1,183 timely exclusion 4 requests from class members. See Keough Supp. Aff., (Docket No. 196). These 5 individuals have properly excluded themselves from the settlement class, and neither this 6 Order nor the Final Judgment shall be binding upon them. The Clerk of the Court is 7 directed to maintain, for five years, the record of class members who have timely excluded 8 themselves and to provide a certified copy of such records to the Defendants, at their 9 expense.

10 Untimely Exclusions: As of October 5, 2007, nine class members had made 11 untimely requests for exclusion. Id. Each of these nine persons are thus settlement class 12 members and bound by this order and the Final Judgment.⁴

13 2. Scope of the Release

14 The parties agreed to a release of CROA claims and of claims where their stated basis is 15 about improvement of a consumer's credit record, history, or rating. At the insistence of the Court, 16 this release was written to limit its scope to the claims raised in this litigation.

22 ⁴ Class members marked as "late" in Exhibit 1 of Keough Second Supp. Aff., 23 did not file timely exclusions. (See Docket Nos. 196, 197). This list includes:

No. 1184	Sergey Golod (WA)	No. 1189	Keishana White (IN)
No. 1185	Lisa Mace (NC)	No. 1190	Sally Barnhill (OH)
No. 1186	Charles Patrick (TN)	No. 1191	Susan Shelton (TX)
No. 1187	Teresa Crook (GA)	No. 1192	Matthew Maurer (PA)
No. 1188	Carmelita Vazquez (PA)

28 Any additional late exclusions submitted to the Settlement Administrator, who are not identified by name in Exhibit 1, also remain in the class.

1 C. Relief Offered in the Settlement

2 The Court approves of the multifaceted relief offered to the class members in this 3 settlement. Defendants have agreed to remedial relief, in-kind relief and are responsible for 4 payment of certain litigation costs.

5 1. Remedial Relief

6 CIC and Experian agree to specific deletions to or modifications of language on particular 7 websites. CIC further agrees not to make certain statements in selling credit scores or credit 8 monitoring to Internet consumers. The Yahoo! product at issue is no longer offered.

9 The changes to language on the website address the unique CROA claims asserted by 10 Plaintiff. Such relief is intended to change or remove language which suggested to consumers that 11 their purchase of Defendants' products or services could result in the improvement of their credit 12 rating or history. For example, language such as, "you get personalized tips and analysis and learn 13 how to boost your credit rating" and "get on the road to good credit" will be changed to "you get 14 information regarding factors that affect a credit score" and "get on the road to credit knowledge," 15 respectively. Statements like "increase your purchasing power" and "find and dispute mistakes 16 that could be hurting your credit rating" will be deleted.

17 2. In-Kind Relief

18 Defendants are also offering in-kind relief, providing each eligible settlement class member 19 with the choice of either a free Experian credit score (retail value of $5.00 at the time of settlement) 20 or two months of free credit monitoring (retail value of $9.95 per month at the time of the 21 settlement). Because the settlement class consists of consumers who previously purchased similar 22 products or services, class members are likely to be interested in such relief.

23 The credit score will be based on batched process and on the settlement class member's 24 Experian credit report. Each settlement class member electing the credit-monitoring benefit will be 25 enrolled in credit monitoring and thereafter automatically charged the then-applicable rate unless 26 the member affirmatively cancels enrollment (any time after submitting the benefit code) prior to 27 the expiration of the 60-day, settlement-benefit period.

28

1 3. Attorney's Fees, Class Notice, and Settlement Administration

2 As explained in Part VII of this order, Defendants will be paying a $2.55 million award of 3 attorney's fees and expenses. They will also bear the costs of providing class notice and of 4 administering the settlement. Although Defendants have not quantified such costs here, significant 5 resources were expended to notify the 14 million class members.⁵

6 D. Notice to the Class and Governmental Entities

7 1. Notice to Governmental Entities

8 At the Court's direction, Defendants sent notice that would satisfy the Class Action 9 Fairness Act of 2005 ("CAFA").⁶ Such notice was directed to the United States Attorney General, 10 to the attorneys general in all 50 states and the District of Columbia, and to 11 other state agencies 11 that specifically monitor the credit industry. 28 U.S.C. § 1715(b). Notice was also provided to the 12 Federal Trade Commission, the agency charged with enforcing CROA.

13 2. Notice to the Class

14 Defendants and the Settlement Administrator implemented the approved four-part notice 15 program within the Court's deadlines. See Keough Affs., (Docket No. 139, 141, 142). To effect 16 notice, they: (1) established an official settlement website which posted the Long-Form Notice and 17 other settlement documents; (2) emailed notice to more than 14 million tentative class members 18 identified from consumer records; (3) mailed the Long-Form Notice to more than 3.9 million 19 tentative class members whose email notice was undeliverable or where no email address could be 20 located; and (4) published notice in one daily and in one weekend issue of the national edition of 21 USA Today.

22 Email notice was particularly suitable in this case, where settlement class members' claims 23 arise from their visits to Defendants' Internet websites. See, e.g. Lundell v. Dell, Inc., 2006 WL 24

26 ⁵ Cost of notice and settlement administration in similar case involving class of 27 6.6. million - with same settlement administrator - estimated to exceed $1,000,000.
Hillis v. Equifax Consumer Services, Inc., 2007 WL 1953464, at *5 (N.D.Ga.).

28 ⁶ The Court ordered this notice even though at the time there was no clear authority as to whether CAFA retroactively applied to cases filed prior to 2005.

1 3507938, at *1 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 5, 2006). The Court reviewed and approved these notices before 2 they were disseminated and found that they were written in plain language.

3 The Court concludes that the notice was reasonably calculated under the circumstances to 4 apprise the settlement class of the pendency of this action, all material elements of the Amended 5 Settlement, and the opportunity for settlement class members to exclude themselves from, or object 6 to, or comment on the settlement and to appear at the Final Fairness Hearing on their own behalf or 7 through counsel. This notice program satisfied both Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23(c)(2)(B)
 8 (certification notice requires "best notice practicable under the circumstances") and Rule 9 23(e)(1)(B) (settlement notice must be directed "in a reasonable manner to all members who would 10 be bound").⁷ It also properly informed class members of the amount of attorney's fees requested by 11 Class Counsel as required by Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23(h)(1). Notice given was due, 12 adequate, and sufficient. It complied with the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, due process, and 13 any other applicable rules of the court.

15 V. OBJECTIONS TO SETTLEMENT

16 There were 139 objectors to the settlement, some of whom appeared through counsel at the 17 Final Fairness Hearing.⁸ Even though some objectors failed to provide certain identifying 18 information about themselves as required by the Preliminary Approval Order, the Court denied 19 Plaintiff's motion to strike those objections and considered them as well at the hearing.

20 The objections fall into the following six categories: (1) objections to the benefits offered, 21 (2) objections to the notice, (3) objections to the requested amount of attorney's fees, (4) objections 22 to the scope of the release, and (5) irrelevant or incomprehensible objections.

 25 ⁷ In class-action settlements, it is common practice to provide a single notice program 26 that satisfies both of these notice standards. See DAVID F. HERR, ANNOTATED MANUAL FOR COMPLEX LITIGATION § 21.31 (4th ed. 2005).

27 ⁸ See Keough Aff. and Supp. Aff., (Docket Nos. 167, 196); Edward F. Siegel 28 represented objectors Richard Oster, Jeff Heinrich and Norman Palmer. Attorney J.
 Garrett Kendrick appeared for Joshua Hazan. Objectors Rodney Ashburn and Aron Noelle Griffis appeared through attorney John W. Davis. Attorney Lawrence W.
 Schonbrun represented Marty Evans and Michael Weiss.

1 A. Objections to Benefits Offered

2 1. Objections to the In-Kind Relief

3 Some objectors protest that the in-kind relief has little value. However, the credit score and 4 credit monitoring benefits are likely to have some value to this class, which consists of individuals 5 who previously purchased Defendants' credit score or credit monitoring products. The Court has 6 been informed that the credit score will provide a numerical score that informs a class member 7 where his or her credit standing falls in a range as compared with other consumers. This 8 information is valuable for anyone interested in keeping up with his or her personal finances, not 9 only those planning a major purchase. Finally, and perhaps most importantly, these objections do 10 not sufficiently consider the value of the remedial relief offered or the considerable risks involved 11 with continued litigation.

12 Some objectors complained that the Amended Settlement is a "coupon settlement"⁹ or that 13 the benefits are not transferable on a secondary market. However, the in-kind relief offered in this 14 case is not a "coupon settlement" because it does not require class members to spend money in 15 order to realize the settlement benefit. Further, the objectors cite no controlling authority requiring 16 an in-kind benefit to be transferable. Transferability is typically offered in order to avoid the 17 criticism that the class members must spend money to obtain a benefit, which is not the case here.
18 The question is not whether a better benefit could theoretically be provided, but whether the 19 settlement is "fair, adequate and free from collusion." Hanlon v. Chrysler Corp., 150 F.3d 1011, 20 1027 (9th Cir. 1998).

21 Finally, some objectors complain that they should get a full cash refund. This is 22 tantamount to complaining that the settlement should be "better," which is not a valid objection. Id.
23 at 1027. It also fails to recognize that settlement, as a product of compromise, typically offers less 24 than a full recovery. See EEOC v. Hiram Walker & Sons, Inc., 768 F.2d 884, 889 (7th Cir. 1985).

27 ⁹ Raymond Cooper was among the putative class members who primarily 28 objected to this settlement as a "coupon" settlement. (Docket No. 143). However, Cooper also excluded himself from the class. (Docket No. 167). In any event, all of his objections were raised by other class members and accordingly considered.

1 Such objections fail to consider the limited nature of the class release and the vulnerability and risk 2 of proceeding with the case on the merits.

3 The Court concludes that the relief afforded to class members, although modest, is 4 appropriate and valuable given the circumstances.

5 2. Objections to the Automatic-Renewal Element

6 Some settlement class members object to the automatic-renewal element of the 7 credit-monitoring benefit. The Court has already found that this automatic-renewal element, also 8 called a negative option, was fairly and reasonably disclosed.¹⁰ The disclosure of automatic 9 renewal will also be repeated when settlement class members go to the website to choose and 10 obtain their settlement benefit.

11 The objectors did not address the adequacy of disclosure, but rather speculated that some 12 consumers might forget to cancel or have difficulty in cancelling. Although the Court appreciates 13 this concern, such speculation is not a basis for denying approval of an otherwise fair and 14 reasonable settlement. Weight is given to the fact that settlement class members are not required to 15 accept automatic renewal to receive a settlement benefit. Members may avoid it by choosing the 16 credit score benefit or by cancelling credit-monitoring within the 60-day benefit period. The 17 presence of the negative option has been weighed in the context of the other aspects of the 18 settlement, and in that context, it is fair, reasonable and adequate.

19 3. Objections to the Claims Process

20 Some objectors complain about the two-step process for obtaining a settlement benefit.
21 First, the class member selects a benefit by completing a registration form that can be submitted 22 online or mailed to the Settlement Administrator (Garden City Group). After completing this step, 23 the Settlement Administrator will email the class member a benefit code. Then, the class member 24 must enter this code on a CIC website. After the code is submitted, the consumer will receive the 25 chosen settlement benefit from CIC.

26
27 ¹⁰ The notices explain how a class member who chooses the credit monitoring benefit 28 may cancel membership to avoid automatic renewal. All of the notices included on the first page (in bold, 14-point type) plain language disclosing the automatic-renewal.

1 Objectors complain that the two-step aspect of the process is burdensome, that the claims 2 process requires technical acumen, and that obtaining a benefit requires the class member to 3 provide identifying information. None of these arguments are persuasive. Only the Settlement 4 Administrator has the resources to handle step one. Only the Defendants have the technology (and 5 the sensitive personal information about each class member) to perform step two. Class members 6 have all demonstrated their ability to navigate the Internet through past dealings with Defendants.
7 Finally, if the Defendants did not ask (over a secure site) for personal identifying information about 8 a class member, it could not match up the member with the corresponding credit information. The 9 objections to the claims process thus fail.

10

11 B. Objections to Notice

12 A few objectors say that class members may have been reluctant, after receiving the e-mail 13 inviting them to visit the settlement website, to actually click on the site. Such claimed reluctance 14 was due to concern that the email notice was an Internet "phishing" scam.¹¹ The objectors present 15 anecdotal evidence that some class members sought advice from online technical or consumer 16 protection forums to address these concerns. There, many were told it was probably an internet 17 identity theft scam and were advised to delete the e-mail without visiting the website. (See Docket 18 No. 184). Supposedly, this may have been so, even though visiting the settlement website did not 19 require an individual to divulge personal identifying data.

20 Class Counsel respond that the email notice was designed with the intent to maximize the 21 number of notice recipients. The long form of the notice was intentionally not included in the email 22 over concern that it would trigger spam filters. The decision was thus made to place the long form 23 of the notice on a website and to use the email to provide brief notice and to direct interested class 24 members to the website. Counsel also note that the phone number listed on the website as well as 25 the inclusion of identifying information about the case were mechanisms for class members to 26 verify the legitimacy of the notice.

27

28 ¹¹ A phishing scam involves Internet "fraudsters" who send spam or pop-up electronic messages to lure personal information from unsuspecting victims. See FTC Consumer Alert, available at, www.ftc.gov/bcp/edu/pubs/consumer/alerts/alt127.shtm

1 The Court acknowledges evidence indicating that some number of class members may 2 have deleted the email notice out of concern that it was an identity theft scam. However, no 3 objector has presented evidence of how widespread this concern was throughout the class. There 4 are tradeoffs involved in any form of notice, especially with a settlement class of this size. For 5 approval, the notice need not have been perfect. Rather, it needed to be the "best notice practicable 6 under the circumstances" and directed "in a reasonable manner to all members who would be 7 bound." Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(2)(B); Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(1)(B). The email notice program 8 adopted in this case met these requirements.

10 C. Objections to the Requested Attorney's Fees

11 The objections to the attorney's fees largely consisted of vague objections to the amount 12 sought and to claims that the fees were not sufficiently tied to the benefits. These objections are 13 fully addressed in Part VII of this order and dismissed. That analysis is adopted here.

14
15 D. Objections to the Scope of the Release

16 Some objectors assert that the release is too broad.¹² The Court is satisfied that this is not 17 so. The earlier, more expansive, versions of the release were rejected by this Court. The release 18 language, as approved here, does not purport to release all claims based on class members' purchase 19 of credit monitoring or credit scores. Rather, it is intended to release only the claims raised in this 20 litigation and is approved by the Court in reliance on Defendants' representation that no other 21 putative (or certified) class actions alleging CROA violations are pending against any Defendant.
22 (Docket No. 194). After such considerations, the Court finds the release to be fair and reasonable.

23
25
26
27
28

¹² Although, broad releases are sometimes approved in class action settlements. See Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Visa USA, Inc., 396 F.3d 96, 106 (2d Cir. 2005). Note that an even broader release was recently approved in a similar case. Hillis, 2007 WL 1953464, at *12.

1 E. Irrelevant or Incomprehensible Objections

2 1. Incomprehensible Objections

3 Roughly 10% of the objection letters were incomprehensible. The very nature of these 4 objections makes it impossible for the Court to address them, but such objections are to be expected 5 from a settlement class including 14 million people. These objections are overruled.

6 2. Irrelevant Objections

7 a. Objections About a Class Member's Particular Credit Report

8 Another 10% of the class members who objected complained, not about the class 9 settlement, but about alleged errors in the class member's own particular credit report. For instance, 10 some class members complained that a lender's tradeline included an incorrect balance, or that a 11 particular line of credit should no longer be reported. Such objections are irrelevant to the 12 determination of whether the settlement should be finally approved.

13 b. Objections About Original Purchase of Product or Service

14 Another group of class members objected not to the automatic-renewal element of this 15 settlement, but to the automatic renewal of their original purchases of Defendants' products. In 16 those transactions, consumers who signed up for a trial membership in credit monitoring received it 17 initially at no charge. If the consumer did not cancel the service within the trial period, the service 18 continued and the consumer was thereafter charged. These objections are irrelevant to the 19 allegations of CROA liability in this lawsuit and to the extent that such objections are relevant, they 20 have been addressed above in Part V, Section A2.

21 c. Objections about invalid "free credit report" settlements

22 Objector Joshua Hazan objected to the provision of a "free credit report" as a settlement 23 benefit, citing Acosta v. Trans Union, LLC, 240 F.R.D. 564, 573 (C.D. Cal. 2007) [superseded by, 24 243 F.R.D. 377, 390]. This objection is misplaced because this settlement does not offer a free 25 credit report as a settlement benefit — it offers a credit score or credit monitoring. Although 26 federal law entitles an individual to a free annual credit report from Experian, there is no law 27 requiring free credit scores or monitoring.

28 These matters are irrelevant to the current proceeding and are, therefore, overruled.

1 The objections give scant, if any, recognition to the significant hurdles faced by the 2 Plaintiff and the class on the merits of the CROA claim, or on the risk, expense, complexity and 3 likely duration of further litigation. In particular, and despite an express invitation from the Court, 4 no objector ever addressed whether a class could or should be certified here for trial purposes given 5 the failure to obtain certification in Helms. The few objections that purport to consider the viability 6 of Plaintiff's claim either do so in a conclusory manner, or paint an unreasonably rosy picture of the 7 prospects of success for this class. Plaintiff would likely face serious difficulty obtaining superior 8 benefits through litigation than those conferred by the Amended Settlement. Accordingly, all 9 objections which have been submitted have been considered by the Court and are OVERRULED.

12 VI. MOTION FOR FINAL APPROVAL

13 A. Final Certification of Settlement Class

14 In order to certify a settlement class, the requirements of Rule 23 must generally be 15 satisfied and each are considered here. See Hanlon, 150 F.3d at 1019 (citing Amchem Prods., Inc.
16 v. Windsor, 521 U.S. 591, 613 (1997)). In assessing Rule 23 requirements in the settlement context, 17 a "court need not inquire whether the case, if tried, would present intractable management problems 18 . . . for the proposal is that there be no trial." Amchem, 521 U.S. at 620.

19 1. The Requirements of Rule 23(a)

20 For certification of a settlement class, Rule 23(a) requires: (1) numerosity, (2) 21 commonality, (3) typicality, and (4) adequacy of representation. In granting preliminary approval, 22 this Court held that the requirements of Rule 23(a) were satisfied and that the "tentative settlement 23 class is superior to individual lawsuits." The Helms court, under nearly identical circumstances, 24 also found that they were met. Helms, 236 F.R.D. at 564-67.

25 Numerosity. The class of approximately 14 million individuals is so numerous that 26 joinder of all members is impracticable. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(1); see Hanlon, 150 F.3d at 1019.

27

28

1 Commonality. Further, this case involves common issues of fact and law for the class 2 arising out of the construction and application of CROA to the Defendants and their services and 3 products. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(2).

4 Typicality. The claims of the named Plaintiff are typical of the settlement class, and 5 depend for their resolution on the construction and application of CROA to the Defendants and 6 their services and products. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(3).

7 Adequacy. And finally, with respect to legal adequacy, two questions must be resolved:
8 (1) do the named plaintiff and his or her counsel have any conflicts of interest with other class 9 members, and (2) will the named plaintiff and plaintiff's counsel vigorously prosecute the action on 10 behalf of the class? Hanlon, 150 F.3d at 1020. Here, Browning and Class Counsel do not have any 11 conflicts of interest with the class members. Importantly, the settlement makes all class members 12 eligible for the same relief. Id. at 1021. Furthermore, Class Counsel vigorously pursued the class 13 claims through extended litigation in Helms, followed by successfully obtaining leave of court to 14 add CIC and Experian to this class action after certification was denied in Helms. As such, the 15 named Plaintiff and counsel have fairly and adequately protected class interests. Fed. R. Civ. P.
16 23(a)(4).

17 2. Requirements of Rule 23(b)(3)

18 For certification under Rule 23(b)(3), a class action must meet two more requirements: (1) 19 common questions must "predominate over any questions affecting only individual members"; and 20 (2) class resolution must be "superior to other available methods of fair and efficient adjudication of 21 the controversy." Amchem, 521 U.S. at 615; Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(3).

22 Predominance. In this case (and as the Helms court found), questions of law or fact 23 common to members of the settlement class concerning the application and construction of CROA 24 predominate over any questions affecting only individual members.

25 Superiority. It was this requirement which caused the Helms court to deny class 26 certification. That court reasoned that class litigation would not be a superior method of 27 adjudication when damages, if aggregated by the class trial procedure, could be "grossly 28

1 disproportionate to the conduct at issue." Helms, 236 F.R.D. at 564-68.¹³ However, this reasoning 2 does not apply here because the appropriate relief is agreed upon by the parties. Moreover, a 3 settlement class need not be "manageable" as a trial class action because no trial will occur.
 4 Amchem, 521 U.S. at 619. This Court determined in its Preliminary Approval Order that the 5 requirements of Rule 23(b)(3) had been met, and the objectors do not suggest otherwise.

6 Finding the requirements of Rule 23(a) and Rule 23(b)(3) satisfied, the Court confirms and 7 finally approves the settlement class certification.

9 B. Final Approval of Settlement

10 This Court may approve the class action settlement after hearing and upon a finding that 11 the settlement is "fair, reasonable, and adequate." Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e)(1)(C). Therefore, the 12 question is "not whether the final product could be prettier, smarter, or snazzier, but whether it is 13 fair, adequate, and free from collusion." Hanlon, 150 F.3d at 1027. It is "the settlement taken as a 14 whole ... that must be examined for overall fairness." Id. at 1026.

15 A settlement under Rule 23(e) requires that the Court balance a number of factors, 16 including: (1) the strength of the plaintiff's case; (2) the risk, expense, complexity, and likely 17 duration of further litigation; (3) the risk of maintaining class action status throughout trial; (4) the 18 amount offered in settlement; (5) the extent of discovery completed; (6) the experience and views 19 of counsel; (7) the presence of a governmental participant; and (8) the reaction of the class 20 members to the proposed settlement. Churchill Vill., LLC v. Gen. Elec., 361 F.3d 566, 575 (9th Cir.
 21 2004). Courts also consider (9) the absence of collusion in the settlement process. Id.

22 1. The Strength of Plaintiff's Case

23 In considering the strength of Plaintiff's case, legal uncertainties at the time of settlement - 24 particularly those which go to fundamental legal issues - favor approval. See Glass v. UBS Fin.
 25 Servs., Inc., 2007 WL 221862, at *3 (N.D. Cal. 2007). Here, there is uncertainty as to whether

26

27

28 ¹³ It noted that the violation was at most, a technical violation of a complex statutory scheme and that "[t]he damages resulting would be devastating and largely out of proportion with the culpability of defendant's conduct." Helms, 236 F.R.D. at 569.

United States District Court
 For the Northern District of California

1 Defendants fall within CROA's definition of a "credit repair organization."¹⁴ Because Plaintiff's 2 allegations are based on CROA's provisions regulating "credit repair organizations," the question of 3 whether Defendants are within that definition is crucial to whether CROA's regulations apply to 4 Defendants. Furthermore, Plaintiff's case was weakened by other Helms court decisions. The 5 summary judgment order undermined the CROA fraud allegations and the denial of class 6 certification would be a particularly difficult hurdle to moving forward with this litigation. This 7 level of uncertainty weighs heavily in favor of approval.

8 2. Risk, Expense, Complexity, and Likely Duration of Future Litigation

9 As previously noted, further litigation carries a risk that the appellate courts will ultimately 10 adopt an interpretation of CROA adverse to the class. See Hillis, 237 F.R.D. at 516-17; Helms v.
 11 ConsumerInfo.com, Inc., No. 05-13335-W (11th Cir. Jan. 24, 2006). Should this Court (or the 12 Ninth Circuit on appeal) adopt such an interpretation, the class' CROA claims will be extinguished 13 and the class would receive no recovery for those claims.

14 If this settlement is not approved, further litigation before this Court would be time 15 consuming, complex and expensive. The Court reasonably anticipates a motion for class 16 certification and competing motions for summary judgment centered upon competing 17 interpretations of CROA. Regardless of how this Court might have ruled on the merits of the legal 18 issues, its decisions would almost certainly be met by one party with an appeal, and the parties 19 would have faced the expense, delays and uncertainties inherent in litigating an appeal. While 20 litigating in this Court, counsel would also be dealing with the currently stayed appeal in the 21 Eleventh Circuit. Accordingly, this factor supports approval of the Amended Settlement.

22 3. Risk to Maintaining Class Action Status Throughout Trial

23 When Class Counsel were denied class certification on behalf of a similar class in Helms, 24 they sought leave of this Court to file a Second Amended Complaint naming CIC and Experian as 25

26 ¹⁴ Two district courts in the Eleventh Circuit reached contrary conclusions on this 27 legal issue. Helms, 436 F. Supp. 2d at 1238 (finding that CIC fell within the definition, but certifying ruling for interlocutory appeal); Hillis v. Equifax Consumer Servs., Inc., 237 28 F.R.D. 491, 513-517 (N.D. Ga. 2006) (decided after Helms, with similar CROA claims against similar defendant; finding as a matter of law that plaintiff failed to show defendant was a credit repair organization; the case then settled).

United States District Court

For the Northern District of California

1 defendants. In granting that motion, this Court stated it was "skeptical" that a trial class could be 2 certified. It again noted its skepticism when granting preliminary approval. Developments in the 3 law since the filing of the Second Amended Complaint further underscore the risk that class 4 certification for trial would not have been obtained. Notwithstanding this, Class Counsel was able 5 to negotiate a settlement that provides a benefit to approximately 14 million consumers and, 6 through the remedial relief, to the general public as well.

7 For the reasons stated, there is a substantial risk that Plaintiff would not be able to obtain 8 and maintain class certification. This factor weighs in favor of approval.

9 4. Amount Offered

10 In considering the amount offered in the settlement, the Court may also look at the 11 difficulties Plaintiff would have in proceeding with litigation. In re Mego Fin. Corp. Sec. Litig., 12 213 F.3d 454, 459 (9th Cir. 2000). The benefits offered were discussed in Part IV, Section C.

13 The Court finds that the consideration offered here — remedial and in-kind relief plus 14 additional expenses incurred by Defendants — is adequate to support the proposed settlement, 15 given the uncertainty of Plaintiff's legal claims under CROA, coupled with denial of class 16 certification in other, similar district court cases. The amount offered provides the class with a 17 greater recovery than it would likely achieve through litigation, and does so in a more expedient 18 and certain manner. This factor weighs in favor of approving the Amended Settlement.

19 5. Extent of Discovery Completed and Stage of Proceedings

20 In assessing this factor, it is appropriate to consider the antecedent to this case, Helms, 21 given the agreement of the parties that the discovery from Helms applied in Browning.

22 Helms was filed in 2003 and was litigated for more than two years, with both parties 23 conducting depositions, answering interrogatories, and responding to document requests. During 24 discovery, CIC reportedly produced millions of emails, tens of thousands of documents, and more 25 than 100,000 recordings of phone calls. The parties filed competing motions for summary 26 judgment which were resolved by the court. Eventually, the district court denied class certification.
27 On the issue of whether Defendants were subject to CROA, the parties completed appellate briefing 28 before the Eleventh Circuit.

1 Browning was filed against Yahoo! in 2004. It, too, has involved discovery and motion 2 practice, including a motion to dismiss by Yahoo! and the aforementioned motion to add two 3 additional defendants. Furthermore, this Court has exercised considerable scrutiny over the 4 settlement, issuing several interim orders in response to the parties' initial proposed settlement.

5 Finally, the parties engaged in multiple rounds of mediation. As a result, the parties and 6 this Court are well positioned to assess the strength of this case and the comparative benefits of the 7 proposed settlement. See Young v. Polo Retail, LLC, 2007 WL 951821, at *4 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 28, 8 2007). Accordingly, this factor weighs in favor of approving the Amended Settlement.

9 6. Experience and Views of Counsel

10 The settlement is the product of arm's length negotiations that were conducted by counsel 11 who are experienced in class action litigation. Counsel for both sides believe that the Amended 12 Settlement reflects the relative strengths and weaknesses of the parties' respective claims and 13 defenses, as well as the substantial risks presented in continuing the litigation.

14 Moreover, the settlement was the product of mediation by a qualified and experienced 15 lawyer, Rodney A. Max,¹⁵ who reported that the case was "professionally, ethically, and reasonably 16 mediated, negotiated and resolved." Max Aff., (Docket No. 132-7). The mediator recommended 17 the settlement to the Court as being "fair, reasonable, and adequate." Id.

18 The experience and views of counsel weigh in favor of approval.

19 7. Presence of Governmental Participant

20 The court, in requiring CAFA notice to be sent to various governmental entities,¹⁶ intended 21 to provide an opportunity for comment or objection by such entities. Defendants provided a 22 thorough case history and kept these entities informed of the developments in the case. However, 23 no governmental entity sought to participate in the settlement proceedings by objection or 24 comment. See Keough Aff., (Docket No. 167).

 26
 27 ¹⁵ Max is an Alabama lawyer and mediator who has practiced law for over 30 years 28 and who has, for the past ten years, focused his practice on the mediation of hundreds of complex civil cases in 26 states and the District of Columbia.

¹⁶ For details, see Part IV, Section D1.

1 The fact that the agency responsible for CROA enforcement - the FTC - did not object to 2 the settlement is significant. CIC and the FTC previously entered into a consent decree which 3 required CIC to make certain disclosures in connection with its negative option marketing.¹⁷ Given 4 this history, the Court's preliminary approval order specifically addressed the negative option 5 feature of this settlement. That order noted this Court's belief that offering a choice of settlement 6 benefits — one of which did not have the negative option — avoided the potential problems cited 7 by the FTC in its opposition to a negative option in a class action settlement. See Chavez v. Netflix, 8 Inc., No. CGC-04-434884 (Cal. Super. Ct. October 27, 2005). As evidenced by that case, the FTC 9 has previously objected where it believed a negative option in a settlement was either inadequately 10 disclosed or inappropriately structured.

11 Because numerous governmental agencies (including the FTC) were given notice of the 12 settlement and have not objected, this factor weighs in favor of the settlement.

13 8. Reaction of Class Members to Proposed Settlement

14 The next factor that the court must consider is the reaction of the class to the proposed 15 settlement. Hanlon, 150 F.3d at 1026. Of the 14 million settlement class members who were sent 16 notice, 139 objected to the Amended Settlement. See Keough Aff. and Supp. Aff., (Docket Nos.
 17 167, 196). Statistically, this indicates that there was 1 objector for every 100,720 class members.
 18 This objection rate is low, even compared to objection rates in other, similar class action 19 settlements.¹⁸ The relatively low percentage of objectors weighs in favor of approval.

20 9. Absence of Collusion in Settlement Process

21 Finally, this court should satisfy itself that the settlement was not the product of collusion.
 22 See Young, 2007 WL 951821, at *3. Here, the original proposed settlement was the product of 23 mediation arising out of Helms and settlement negotiations covering both Helms and Browning.
 24 Max Aff., (Docket No. 132-7). This negotiation process spanned more than a year.

 26 ¹⁷ See FTC v. ConsumerInfo.com, No. CV SACV 05-801 AHS (MLGx), Stip. Final J.
 27 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 15, 2005).

28 ¹⁸ See, e.g., Glass, 2007 WL 221862, at *5 (approving a settlement with 8 objectors in a class of 13,176, an objection rate of 1 objector for every 1,647 class members).

1 The initial mediation was discontinued because the parties could not reach agreement. The 2 Eleventh Circuit ordered the case to a second mediation. The mediator reported that these 3 negotiations were contentious, with the parties staking out aggressive positions. Id. After several 4 meetings, the parties reached an agreement on the substance of the relief to be provided to the 5 settlement class. Id. Then, the negotiations broke off for a second time when the parties were 6 unable to agree on attorney's fees. Id. The mediator initiated one last effort, submitting a 7 "mediator's proposal" on the attorney's fees which was ultimately accepted. Id.

8 Further, the Amended Settlement was reached in accordance with this Court's interim 9 orders following the initial motion for preliminary approval of the settlement. Accordingly, the 10 Court is satisfied that the settlement procedure was without collusion. This factor weighs in favor 11 of approving the Amended Settlement.

12 Approval of settlements in class action lawsuits is left to the "sound discretion of the trial 13 court." Hillis, 2007 WL 1953464, at * 9. After consideration of the above factors and because 14 public and judicial policies strongly favor settlement of class action law suits, id. at * 9, the Court 15 GRANTS the joint motion for final approval of the Amended Settlement. On balance, the 16 settlement is fair, reasonable and adequate, was determined without fraud or collusion, and is in the 17 best interests of the settlement class.

19 VII. MOTION FOR ATTORNEY'S FEES AND EXPENSES

20 Also before the Court is Class Counsel's Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees and 21 Reimbursement of Expenses. (Docket No. 176). The motion seeks, and CIC and Experian have 22 agreed to pay, $2.55 million for Class Counsel's attorney's fees and expenses. This figure was 23 proposed by the mediator. Max Aff., (Docket No. 132-7). Class Counsel contend that their fee 24 request is appropriate under both a lodestar and percentage-of-the-fund analysis.

25 Lodestar Comparison: The motion for Attorney's Fees is supported with declarations and 26 detailed records showing that 4,798.7 hours were spent on the litigation (Helms and Browning) and 27 giving a full breakdown of expenses. The lodestar amount during this period for attorney time 28 calculated at prevailing market rates is $2,688,647.50. The market rates utilized, the hours

United States District Court
 For the Northern District of California

1 expended, and the expenses incurred appear reasonable and appropriate. Class Counsel's request of 2 $2.55 million, which includes expenses of $47,642.86, is below the lodestar without including the 3 multipliers that typically increase the award of attorney's fees to plaintiffs' attorneys in class action 4 settlements with a risky outcome if litigated to conclusion.

5 Percentage-of-Recovery Comparison: The reasonableness of the requested fee and the 6 lodestar analysis are further supported by a percentage-of-recovery analysis.¹⁹ To begin the 7 analysis, the Court concludes that $35 million²⁰ is one possible estimate of the total monetary 8 benefit created to the class based on the in-kind relief. The $2.55 million requested in attorney's 9 fees and expenses therefore represents approximately 7.3% of this estimated total benefit, falling 10 within the 25% benchmark applied in the Ninth Circuit. Vizcaino v. Microsoft Corp., 290 F.3d at 11 1043, 1047 (9th Cir. 2002), cert denied sub nom. Vizcaino v. Waite, 537 U.S. 1018 (2002).

12 As such, the fee request is reasonable, given the length, novelty and complexity of the 13 litigation, the quality of representation, the risk of nonpayment, the time and labor required, the 14 benefits obtained for the class through the settlement, multipliers applied in similar cases, and the 15 comparisons to a lodestar and percentage-of-recovery analysis. The motion for an award of 16 attorney's fees of $2.55 million (inclusive of $47,642.86 in litigation expenses) is GRANTED. The 17 award shall be paid in accordance with the terms of the Amended Settlement.

19 VIII. CONCLUSION

20 1. The Court designates Chuck Browning as the class representative, and E. Clayton 21 Lowe, Jr. and Peter A. Grammas as Class Counsel.

22
 23 ¹⁹ Objectors dispute the application of a percentage-of-recovery analysis because it 24 does not take into account actual redemption rates. Class Counsel maintain that attorney's 25 fees may be based on the projected total amount of benefit created. Williams v. MGM-Pathe Communications Co., 129 F.3d 1026 (9th Cir. 1997); Young, 2007 WL 951821, at *8. The 26 objectors correctly distinguish the cases cited by Class Counsel as common fund cases. But, because this analysis is applied for the limited purpose of confirming the reasonableness of the requested fee and lodestar amount, the authority is sufficiently analogous.

27 ²⁰ Determined by multiplying the retail value of the credit score ($5.00) by half 28 of the number of class members (7 million). Some class members would presumably choose the benefit of two months free credit-monitoring ($9.95 per month). This estimate does not include the additional benefit derived from the remedial relief.
